

WABASH CENTER

For Teaching and Learning in Theology and Religion

Remember the past, acknowledge the present, and work toward the future.

Lynda Robitaille, St. Mark's College

Blog Series: Theological School Deans

May 15, 2018

Tags: administration | higher education | theological school deans

The cactus can be a metaphor for our institutions; institutions whose pasts may seem dead, yet there may still be new growth emerging. The cactus grows around its historical center. The flowers are new life, distinct from and arising out of the present - in all its steadfastness, stability, and prickliness. The dean is to be the light of perspective whose shadow highlights the institution's place in time.

<https://wabash.center/2018/05/remember-the-past-acknowledge-the-present-and-work-toward-the-future/>